

Junkyard hero

Once upon a time there was a mortician named Marvin. Marvin was a tall handsome young man. He wasn't married and didn't have any kids. Marvin lived a very successful life. He made more money than he knew what to do with. His only wish was to find someone who he could share the money with.

Marvin only had himself to spend money on, so he bought the finest of everything. He had a nice huge house, a big screen TV, a tile floor that heated up with the flip of a switch. He had anything anyone could ever dream of. He even had explosives and sometimes blew up caves because he could. This was his favorite thing to do because dynamite is so awesome!

Marvin loved going on walks. Every day after work he would go for a two mile walk around town to see all the magnificent sights. He decided he would walk on a side of town that he had never really visited before. He walked by the cemetery, some old run-down buildings, and even the state penitentiary. As he kept walking he noticed a lot of people come running out of an old junkyard. He didn't think anything of it and just kept walking until he decided it was time to go home and eat dinner.

After a long gruesome day of work Marvin decided to go for a walk and relieve his stress. All day he thought about what those people were doing in that junkyard he walked past the day before. He decided he would take the same exciting path he took yesterday, only today he was going to go into the junkyard to see what was happened yesterday.

When he arrived to the junkyard there was no one there. Marvin was surprised by this. He looked around and found a hung X spray painted on a sand pit. Marvin decided to walk over and check it out. He made sure no one was watching him. Then he knelt down beside the X and began to dig. He dug all the way to the bottom of the pit and guess what he found? He found a big pit of nothing!!

He thought to himself that it must have been a decoy. He looked all around and found another X painted on a sand pit. He was too tired from digging in the last sand pit and his fingers hurt, so he decided to run home and get some dynamite. When he returned, he stuck the stick of dynamite into the ground and lit the fuse. He ran around the corner while the explosives went off. Then he quickly ran back to see what was under the X. Sadly he found nothing.

Then he looked over his shoulder and found a huge safe. Marvin ran over there quickly and stared at the safe and wondered if he should open it or not. He also wondered why it wasn't underground and just sitting in the open. The absent-minded mortician opened the safe in the junkyard to find the treasure. There was millions of dollars in there. He took the money and went home. The whole way home he wondered what he would do with all that money. Then he decided he would donate it to a children's organization.

He pondered all night about which one he would give it to, but he couldn't come up with any ideas. He decided that he would use his google search engine to find which organization would be best for his large sum of money.

The next day he took his money in to an organization to help cure cancer for younger kids. He said good-bye to the money and the man accepting the donation said thank you for your 3.4 billion dollars.

On his way out he was greeted by a beautiful woman. She had overheard him talking about giving his donation and she thanked him. She told him how her son Darnell has cancer and is fighting it right now. She asked him to lunch and he said yes.

They went to lunch and talked all day, he even went to the hospital to meet her son. They started to hang out more and more every day. They began to fall in love.

Finally one day after Darnell was cured and was able to go home; all three of them went on a trip. They went to Car Hinge. Marvin asked the mother to marry him, and she said yes. Then later that night Marvin started thinking. He thought day in and day out for three whole days, then he realized he didn't know the name of the woman he just asked to marry him. He thought a little bit longer about the situation and decided that it was okay that he didn't know her name because he was so madly in love with her. They all three lived happily ever after.

The End